MARY ANN MOULTON GILES

Mary Ann Moulton, first child of Thomas and Sarah Denton Moulton, was born in 1841 in Irchester, England. Her parents, converts to the church, were baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the year of their daughter's birth on December 29, 1841.

When Mary Ann was fifteen years of age she set sail for America with her parents and family on the ship "Thornton." The entire company numbered 764. Embarking in early April they arrived in New York harbor, June 16, 1856, after a journey of six weeks. They continued by rail to Iowa where they picked up their hand carts for their westward journey.

Upon arrival in Iowa the Moulton family was informed the carts were not ready and they were obliged to wait until they could be made ready. The great demand for hand carts resulted in many being constructed of inadequately dried lumber which rendered them unfit for the hard journey soon to be undertaken. Subsequently, many fell apart and had to be abandoned during the long trek to the West.

Mary Ann, with the others of her father's family, was assigned to the Willie hand cart company. They were plagued enroute by native Indian marauders who stole their wagons and drove off their cattle. Their over-loaded carts were pushed and pulled by hand across the thousand miles which separated them from the valley of the Salt Lake. Many useful items were left along the way because of the necessity to lighten loads and the doubling-up due to the failing carts.

Delays in waiting for carts, weak carts and time-consuming repairs proved disastrous, as is so well known to those who have read the sad history of this company.

Mary Ann Moulton was very much a part of this history, walking the long miles and pushing or pulling as her small, thin body would allow. The rigors of this journey took its toll, for she often told her small children how sickness punished and the grim reaper visited them often. Mary Ann was no stranger to fatigue, nor to exposure to the rain, the sleet and snow and finally the icy crossings and fierce winds which whipped relentlessly across the unsheltered plain and merciless passes encountered along the way.

As if by miracle, and in fulfillment of a blessing of the priesthood given her mother before leaving England, neither Mary Ann nor any member of the family lost their lives. But the hardships of the journey exacted its inexorable price and contributed to her early and untimely passing. She was small of stature and frail by nature. The demands of such an undertaking were equal to the strength of the strongest among them and certainly too much for one so unsuited to them. However, she was not one to complain and she often spoke about the journey to her small children always careful to remind them that things could have been worse and would always express gratitude for her blessings.

Help, sent from the valley at the instance of returning missionaries who overtook and passed the stranded pioneers, arrived in western Wyoming in time to rescue the company from what, for a while, seemed sure death for all in the ice and snow of that hostile area.

With her father's family she arrived in the Salt Lake Valley November 9, 1856. Here they stayed for a time before moving to Provo. On January 19, 1859 Mary Ann Moulton was married to Frederick Giles. In Provo their first child and son Frederick William Giles was born in 1860. During this year she moved with her husband and son to Heber, in the valley of the Provo River. Her first home in Heber was within what has come to be known as the "Old Fort," an area comprising what is now between 100 and 400 West and between 200 and 400 North. It was here that her son John Thomas and her daughter Sarah were born. When Indian troubles had subsided and it was believed safe to leave the fort, her next home was a two room, dirt-roofed log home with a built-in fireplace.

As far as is known there is no photograph of Mary Ann Moulton Giles to let her descendants know of her appearance. It has been told that, on the few occasions when a picture might have been possible, she would wave off the would-be photographer with a flick of her head and a gesturing motion with her hand. People who knew her have said her granddaughter, Verna Mahoney, the wife of J. Cland Hicken, resembled Mary Ann a great deal.

July 4, 1869, dawned with Mary Ann feeling not as well as usual. Later in the day an urgent message was dispatched by horseback rider to her husband who was irrigating at the farm. Efforts to save the frail little mother of three failed and she, who had endured more than her share of hardships, the victim of increasing leg pains, a stubborn lingering cough, and a lung ailment diagnosed as consumption finally converging into pneumonia, at age 28, passed to her reward leaving to her family and descendants a legacy of patience, faith and devotion.

Her remains were laid to rest in Heber Cemetery over-

BLANCHE MOULTON HAWKE 1913

Blanche Moulton Hawke was born July 7, 1913 in Heber City, Utah to Mary Catherine Hicken and Hyrum Moulton. I grew up in Heber, where many friends and loved ones were part of my life; we had to make our own fun in those days and we enjoyed doing it.

I belonged to a singing group called The Moulton Trio and we sang at many different events. That was so much fun!

In 1935 on December 2, I married Don W. Hawke in the Salt Lake Temple. We then moved to Provo, where we have lived in a home that Don built.

We were blessed with eight children, special spirits of our Heavenly Father. They are a joy and a blessing to us. We have twenty-seven grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

I have served many positions in the Church and had the privilege of going on a mission with my husband to the Dallas, Texas Mission. I also worked in the Provo Temple for four years.

I have been blessed with good health, faithful husband and a wonderful family; who could ask for more. 152

Blanche Moulton Hawke was born July 7, 1913 in Heber City, Utah to Mary Catherine Hicken and Hyrum Moulton. I grew up in Heber, where many friends and loved ones were part of my life; we had to make our own fun in those days and we enjoyed doing it.

I belonged to a singing group called The Moulton Trio and we sang at many different events. That was so much fun!

In 1935 on December 2, I married Don W. Hawke in the Salt Lake Temple. We then moved to Provo, where we have lived in a home that Don built.

We were blessed with eight children, special spirits of our Heavenly Father. They are a joy and a blessing to us. We have twenty-seven grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

I have served many positions in the Church and had the privilege of going on a mission with my husband to the Dallas, Texas Mission. I also worked in the Provo Temple for four years.

I have been blessed with good health, faithful husband and a wonderful family; who could ask for more.
